The Chinese in Havana

Havana has a very large Chinese population. Coolies were imported until within a few years in great numbers, and sold under a contract of eight years of service. When this period expired the coolies naturally gravitated toward the cities, and a nucleus once formed. soon spread, until whole sections are peopled almost exclusively with these Mongolians. A few of them have accumulated some wealth, nearly all are industrious, but with the great mass it is a serious question as to the provision for even the meagre food which satisfies their idea of hying. Their young men are fond of imitating the ways, dress, and diversions of the Cuban "blood." There is something exceedingly funny, not to say grotesquely pathetic, in the sight of a Chinaman peering out from the highest of "Piecaddies," and adorned with a stylish silk hat, a cane, and lavender kids. These young fellows acquire all the vices, if not all the virtues, of this cosmopolitan city.

The Chinese too have their theatre. The approach thereto is through dark and narrow streets meagerly lighted by a sickly light here and there from saloons and cuting houses shose signs are in Oriental characters. A little hole in R. C. CROCKER, a stone wall, barely as large as a stove pipe, denotes the ticket office. On guide, intrusted with ample funds thrusts his hand into the injeteries be-| yearl, gaving went to a torrent of youalisms unmistakably heatherish. The deminal for best places creates an evideat excitement in the breasts of the dispensers of tickets. It is clear that the boxes are in very little use at this establishment Thus we find ourselves, a moment later, looking down in solitary grandeur upon a mass of mixed humanits which is too much absorbed in the scene upon the stage to pay much atten-tion to our entry. The room, quite large, is dimly lighted by candles set against the supporting posts, and arranged with an ingenious disregard of stage effects. A number of musicians keep up a desultory din with horns, drams, and cymbris, its volume of intensity rising and falling with the action of the play. The drama itself culminates in frequent well-stimulated acts of domestic violence, giving the finely funed athletic actors an opportunity to display surprising agility. All fe-male parts are assumed by men. It is understood that the most lucrative department of this home of histrionic art is to be found, below the stage, where feet in those minated and well known to the

In almost every town in this and adoining counties there are business men in straightened circumstances who have sufficient outstanding accounts to put them on their feet in good shape if they could only collect the amounts due them. In many cases the incidnant finds that after he has given credit for forty or fifty dellars the debtor slaps out, and he is compelled to make up that loss by mereasing the margin on his sales. If our business men would unity and gradually get down to a cash basis, they could sell the same amount of goods at a reduced price and make more money in the end than they do now. Few men indeed, can afford to run a large business year after year giv- (ing credit everywhere, without failing in the end. It may seem to some that it would be a hardship to farmers and] others to be forced to pay each for everything, but we believe it would be an actual benefit. Ready cash will always buy at a lower figure than the best credit in the country, and ready cash boys only such articles as are necessary, while free credit buys everything on sight -Exchange.

A PROPOSITION is pending in our State Legislature providing for the retention in the hands of County Treasur ers of moneys with which to pay the in terest and principal of county bonds, etc, instead of having such moneys paid into the State Treasury, as required by the existing statute. Such a change in the law would be exceeding ly unadvisable The State Treasury is] the salest and securest "strong-box 'up Illinois. There the public moneys are safe beyond paradvanture. Not so with local county treasuries. The frequency of subestiements and defaications of County Treasurers should be a patent argument against the proposed change From whatever standpoint viewed, the present system is the best. Let the the money to the State Treasurer, who is a safe custodian, and let the latter continue to pay the interest and princi pal of county bonds. The proposed change would distribute the custody of these funds among 100 or more local Treasurers in various parts of the State. and the object of the proposed new law would seem to be give these local Treasurers an opportunity to speculate with these public funds. We can conceive of no other object. The result would be "the old, old stors, and we all know what that is - Chicago Journal
